- Read the following passage and answer the questions below:

According to the Food and Agriculture Organisation, we waste more than a third of the food we produce. A group of graduate students at Lund University wants to change that fact. They have come up with a way to use old fruits and vegetables. They use food that is about to go to waste. It may help people who do not have a lot of access to food.

Food Powder is dried powdered fruits and vegetables, which can be given to people in need after natural disasters. It can also be distributed in low-resource areas where fresh food is difficult to find.

موقع المناهج الكويتية
almanahj.com/kw

Kent Ngo, one of the students who developed Food Powder, says they are not producing something innovative. Powdered food has been around since the early days of astronauts. The students are rethinking food waste. One group of students went to farmers and sellers to get fruit. Another group of students tested different techniques of drying and powdering the food. They decided on spray drying it, and then changing it into a powder. From there, the students looked at ways to distribute the Food Powder, through government support.

Gerald Perry Marin, a member of the group, grew up in the Philippines. He had seen how hurricanes cut people off from their food supply, and how important it was to have access to food. "Today a bag for humanitarian disasters contains nutrients such as strawberry jam, peanut butter and peas in tomato sauce. We think that an easily transported pack of cheap dried food powder with high nutritional value would be a better choice," Marin says.

The students have got support from the government in the Philippines, and they are currently drying calamansi, a citrus fruit that tastes like a mix of lemon and orange. The students also started working with the United Nations, to try to reach more people and countries that could benefit from the Food Powder project. They are working to use calamansi powder in food products, like cake mixes and ice cream. "I was a bit surprised that the calamansi powder tasted so good," Ngo says. "I can't wait for the mango and pineapple powder."

VI- READING COMPREHENSION: (80 Marks)

Read the following passage carefully, then answer the questions below:

If you're feeling down or mentally tired, your phone – which is probably always on and in your hand – might be the problem. A new study has linked feelings of worry, anger, and depression with growing use of smartphones and other devices.

As smart as phones may be these days, teens basically don't know when to stop. To protect your mental health, experts say you must develop ways of diminishing their usage. Cleverly, that involves limiting notifications, deleting some applications, or simply turning smartphones off.

Jean Twenge, psychology professor at San Diego State University, has written a lot on young people and mental health. She recently released a study that shows a link between the use of smartphones and growing rates of depression among teens. The study revealed that teens feelings of sadness and negative thoughts had gone up by 12 per cent between 2010 and 2017. Nearly half of the teens who spend five or more hours a day on a smartphone have mixed feelings of anger and sadness compared to 28 per cent of those who spend less than an hour a day on a device.

'These days, teens can never just step away from social media', said Brian Nolan, a social worker at a secondary school in the US state of Illinois. When your parents were at school they could go out with their friends during the day, and they would relax with their family at night. There was balance. But smartphones don't give that break. The continuous fear of missing out, or the need to feel included, keep teens connected. 'A recent study shows that we touch them about 2,500 times a day on average. To tell a student you can't use it is the same as saying you can't eat. That may sound extreme but that's the reality', Nolan said.

School social workers, as well as health experts at hospitals, confirm they are seeing a rise in signs of depression and worry among teens. But they also say, there are things teens, their parents, and professionals can do to help lower the risks. They say that the best way to fight this is to discuss healthy ways to use smartphones.

Read the following passage carefully, then answer the questions below:

The world would be a much better place if there were fewer car accidents. Car accidents happen daily and regularly these days. They leave pains behind for the victims' families. Many people think that they will never get involved in car accidents. They don't wear their seat belts and they use their cell phones while driving. They do all these things without even giving a second thought, yet accidents due to these things are preventable. People don't realise that doing those minor things cause them severe pains or even deaths.

So what causes the problem? There are many different reasons why car accidents happen. The fatigue of driving for many hours causes many accidents. Drivers get tired and fall asleep without even noticing it. Some people are distracted while driving. They are on the phone, sending text messages, or simply they set their eyes on something else and run into walls or other cars. Speeding is also one of the reasons for accidents. Even though there are speed limits for different places, people don't keep them. For teens, they tend to race on highways with motorbikes or cars.

There is no simple solution to the problem of car accidents. People need to be aware of accidents at anytime and anywhere. Individuals cannot solve this problem. We all have to work on it as one nation to solve it. Everyone should obey and follow the rules. That's why there are rules.

People should follow the laws otherwise they should pay fines. People who exceed speed limits, people who pass the red lights and people who throw rubbish out the window should be punished. Another basic solution we could do is to put more cameras on the road to take more pictures of those who speed up over the limit. We can put warning signs of cameras to help the people stay alarmed. Then the teens would not race anymore. We should teach about car accidents, and about their results more often in schools.

From a, b, c and d choose the correct answer: (8 x10=80 Marks)

Many people catch a cold in the springtime. When a virus attacks your body, your body works hard to get rid of it. Blood rushes to your nose and brings congestion with it. VI- Reading Comprehension (80 Marks)

Read the following passage carefully, then answer the questions below:

The world would be a much better place if there were fewer car accidents. Car accidents happen daily and regularly these days. They leave pains behind for the victims' families. Many people think that they will never get involved in car accidents. They don't wear their seat belts and they use their cell phones while driving. They do all these things without even giving a second thought, yet accidents due to these things are preventable. People don't realise that doing those minor things cause them severe pains or even deaths.

So what causes the problem? There are many different reasons why car accidents happen. The fatigue of driving for many hours causes many accidents. Drivers get tired and fall asleep without even noticing it. Some people are distracted while driving. They are on the phone, sending text messages, or simply they set their eyes on something else and run into walls or other cars. Speeding is also one of the reasons for accidents. Even though there are speed limits for different places, people don't keep them. For teens, they tend to race on highways with motorbikes or cars.

There is no simple solution to the problem of car accidents. People need to be aware of accidents at anytime and anywhere. Individuals cannot solve this problem. We all have to work on it as one nation to solve it. Everyone should obey and follow the rules. That's why there are rules.

People should follow the laws otherwise they should pay fines. People who exceed speed limits, people who pass the red lights and people who throw rubbish out the window should be punished. Another basic solution we could do is to put more cameras on the road to take more pictures of those who speed up over the limit. We can put warning signs of cameras to help the people stay alarmed. Then the teens would not race anymore. We should teach about car accidents, and about their results more often in schools.

Many people catch a cold in the springtime.When a virus attacks your body, your body works hard to get rid of it. Blood rushes to your nose and brings congestion with it. You feel terrible because you can't breathe well, but your body is actually "eating" the virus. Your temperature rises and you get a fever, but the heat of your body is killing the virus. You also have a runny nose to stop the virus from getting to your cells. The immune system in your body attacks any foreign invaders such as viruses. You may feel unhappy, but actually your wonderful body is doing everything that can kill the cold.

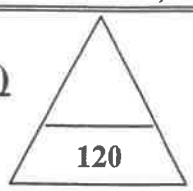
VI- Reading Comprehension and Summary making (120Marks)



Read the following passage carefully, then answer the questions below:

There are five people at our table, including myself. I've already learnt a great deal about them in the short time we have been at sea, although we rarely meet except at meal-times.

First of all, there is Dr. Stone-my favourite, I must confess. He is a man of about sixty-five, with grey hair and a humorous face. He gave up his job a short while ago and is now travelling round the world before he retires to some quiet country villages. As a young man, he served abroad for many years as a doctor in the army. He speaks several languages and has told us a great deal about the ports that we are going to visit. He seems to have been everywhere. During the day, when he is not talking to his fellow passengers (one gets the impression that he already knows everybody on board!), he sits on deck reading or else gazes out to sea through an old-fashioned telescope.

Then there is "grandmother". I call her that because her name escapes me. In spite of being a grandmother, she remarkably looks young, not more than forty-five. She is on her way to visit a daughter who emigrated to Australia some years ago. Naturally she is very excited at the thought of seeing her again, and her three grandchildren, whom she has never seen. She can talk of little else. This voyage is a great adventure for her because she has never been abroad before.

On the other hand, there is an engineer by the name of Barlow. He has been on leave in England and is now returning to his work in Singapore. He has a sense of humour. He seems full of energy: he swims or plays tennis the best part of the day. I have never in my life met a man with such a loud laugh. He has the cabin next to mine and I can hear his laugh even through the wall.

The other person who sits at our table is Mrs. Hunt. I have found out hardly anything about her. She is extremely quiet and rarely talks, except to consult the doctor about her children's various diseases. She is on her way to join her husband in India.

25. The best title for this passage could be .....

    b. they always gather at meal times
    c. there are four men and only one lady

VI- Reading Comprehension and Summary Making (120 Marks)

120

Read the following passage carefully, and then answer the questions below:

Water is the oil of the 21st century. It is the valuable thing that determines the wealth of nations. Specialists estimate that by 2020, access to drinking water could be one of the main reasons for international wars.

According to all available information, the world faces a coming up water disaster. The world's current population of 6 billion people is expected to increase to 9 billion by 2050. The United Nations estimates that if we continue to use water at today's rates, the world will face severe water shortage by 2050.

Worldwide, we are taking so much water from our rivers. But wait! If two-thirds of the Earth's surface is covered with water, why don't we have enough water to drink? Of all the water in the world, only one percent can be used in homes and in farming. The rest of the water is either salt or is frozen in polar ice. So, shouldn't global warming release some of that water? In fact, global warming will make the situation worse. Now, water is released gradually from ice and snow into rivers and lakes. If global warming melts the ice and snow, all of the water will be released at one time and most of it will go into oceans and seas.

While some countries see the water problem as a humanitarian issue, others see it as an economic one. We all need water, and some companies make a healthy profit from the situation. Denmark is one country that is taking action to protect water for the future. The Danish government has a ten-step programme to ensure the quality and quantity of water. For one thing, farmers aren't allowed to use more than 170 pesticides because these poisons leak into the water supply. Organic farming is being promoted. Organic farming does not use harmful chemicals which also can leak into water supply. Additionally, other steps are being taken to protect important underground water areas which are essential for maintaining a healthy, natural water supply.

Water shortages are an international problem. We can only hope that the nations of the world will seek a humanitarian solution so that future generations can enjoy this basic source of life.

VI- Reading Comprehension And Summary Making (70 Marks)

Read the following passage carefully, then answer the questions below:

Isaac Newton was always wondering about the things he saw around him. What holds the Moon and planets in the sky? How does a rainbow form? He uncovered basic laws of nature. He used mathematics to explain these laws and predict how objects would behave. He became one of the greatest scientists of all time .

Newton was born in Wools Thorpe, England, on December 25, 1642. He loved to build mechanical models, but he was not a good student. His mother took him out of school so that he could help run the family farm. Newton did not like farming. He liked to read and study on his own. A previous teacher knew that Newton was very smart and helped him go to the University of Cambridge. After Newton graduated, plague broke out in Cambridge. Many people got sick and died. Newton went back to the family farm for two years until the plague ended. He came up with many of his greatest ideas from 1665 to 1667 while he was alone in the countryside.

Newton went back to Cambridge and became a professor of mathematics. He built the first reflecting telescope, which uses a mirror instead of a lens. Newton invented a new kind of mathematics called calculus. Today, scientists and engineers use calculus to solve many kinds of problems. Newton came up with theories about gravity and motion. He thought that the same force pulling people and apples down to Earth keeps the Moon going around Earth and the planets going around the Sun. He used mathematics to prove his theories. Newton used a prism, a piece of glass with many sides, to study light. He found that sunlight is made up of every colour in the rainbow. I- Reading Comprehension And Summary Making (70 Marks)

Read the following passage carefully, then answer the questions below:

Isaac Newton was always wondering about the things he saw around him. What holds the Moon and planets in the sky? How does a rainbow form? He uncovered basic laws of nature. He used mathematics to explain these laws and predict how objects would behave. He became one of the greatest scientists of all time .

Newton was born in Wools Thorpe, England, on December 25, 1642. He loved to build mechanical models, but he was not a good student. His mother took him out of school so that he could help run the family farm. Newton did not like farming. He liked to read and study on his own. A previous teacher knew that Newton was very smart and helped him go to the University of Cambridge. After Newton graduated, plague broke out in Cambridge. Many people got sick and died. Newton went back to the family farm for two years until the plague ended. He came up with many of his greatest ideas from 1665 to 1667 while he was alone in the countryside.

Newton went back to Cambridge and became a professor of mathematics. He built the first reflecting telescope, which uses a mirror instead of a lens. Newton invented a new kind of mathematics called calculus. Today, scientists and engineers use calculus to solve many kinds of problems. Newton came up with theories about gravity and motion. He thought that the same force pulling people and apples down to Earth keeps the Moon going around Earth and the planets going around the Sun. He used mathematics to prove his theories. Newton used a prism, a piece of glass with many sides, to study light. He found that sunlight is made up of every colour in the rainbow. He became famous for his calculus, but he did not tell many people about his theory of gravity. He was shy and modest and did not want other scientists to criticise his work. Finally his friends had him write a book about gravity and motion titled Principia Mathematica. Scientists called the book a masterpiece. Newton was honoured. VI- Reading Comprehension and Summary Making (160 Marks)

Read the following passage carefully, then answer the questions below:

Every time you take a breath, you are inhaling Earth's atmosphere. You cannot see, smell, or taste Earth's atmosphere. It is the air all around you. Other planets also have an atmosphere. An atmosphere is a blanket of gases that wraps around a planet or any other object in space.

Earth's atmosphere is made up of a mix of gases called air. Air contains more nitrogen than any other gas. Nitrogen makes up 78 percent of the air. Oxygen, the gas that is most important for keeping you alive, makes up 21 percent. Earth is the only planet to have so much oxygen in its atmosphere. Water vapour and other gases are also present in small amounts in Earth's atmosphere. The pull of gravity holds the atmosphere in place. Gravity is the force that also keeps you from floating away from Earth.

Although air has weight, you cannot feel it. All the air in the atmosphere presses downward. This weight is called atmospheric pressure which depends on how much gas is in the atmosphere. The higher you go, the less air there is and the lower the atmospheric pressure gets. The atmosphere is heaviest and the atmospheric pressure highest close to Earth. Differences in air temperature close to Earth form areas of high and low pressure. Warm air is light and rises upwards. It makes low-pressure areas. Cold air is heavy and sinks. It makes high-pressure areas.

Air in the atmosphere is always moving. You can feel air blowing on your face. You can see air scattering autumn leaves and making tree branches sway. Moving air is called wind. The wind blows where areas of high and low atmospheric pressure meet. As warm air rises, cold air rushes in to take its place. Big areas of high and low atmospheric pressure cause storms. Thunderstorms often occur where big areas of high and low pressure come together. Huge thunderclouds form in these places. Water vapour in the atmosphere makes clouds. Water vapour is a gas. As the gas cools, it turns to liquid water. The water falls to Earth as rain or snow.

Read the following passage carefully, then answer the questions below:

Every time you take a breath, you are inhaling Earth's atmosphere. You cannot see, smell, or taste Earth's atmosphere. It is the air all around you. Other planets also have an atmosphere. An atmosphere is a blanket of gases that wraps around a planet or any other object in space.

وزارة التربية 2014-2015

Earth's atmosphere is made up of a mix of gases called air. Air contains more nitrogen than any other gas. Nitrogen makes up 78 percent of the air. Oxygen, the gas that is most important for keeping you alive, makes up 21 percent. Earth is the only planet to have so much oxygen in its atmosphere. Water vapour and other gases are also present in small amounts in Earth's atmosphere. The pull of gravity holds the atmosphere in place. Gravity is the force that also keeps you from floating away from Earth.

Although air has weight, you cannot feel it. All the air in the atmosphere presses downward. This weight is called atmospheric pressure which depends on how much gas is in the atmosphere. The higher you go, the less air there is and the lower the atmospheric pressure gets. The atmosphere is heaviest and the atmospheric pressure highest close to Earth. Differences in air temperature close to Earth form areas of high and low pressure. Warm air is light and rises upwards. It makes low-pressure areas. Cold air is heavy and sinks. It makes high-pressure areas.

Air in the atmosphere is always moving. You can feel air blowing on your face. You can see air scattering autumn leaves and making tree branches sway. Moving air is called wind. The wind blows where areas of high and low atmospheric pressure meet. As warm air rises, cold air rushes in to take its place. Big areas of high and low atmospheric pressure cause storms. Thunderstorms often occur where big areas of high and low pressure come together. Huge thunderclouds form in these places. Water vapour in the atmosphere makes clouds. Water vapour is a gas. As the gas cools, it turns to liquid water. The water falls to Earth as rain or snow.
