VI. Reading Comprehension (80 Marks)

Read the following passage carefully, and then answer the questions that follow.

80

Many teenagers today do not get enough sleep because of schoolwork, social media, and long hours spent using electronic devices. Homework, online communication, and entertainment often reduce the time available for rest at night. As a result, many students go to bed late and wake up feeling tired the next morning. However, sleep is essential for both physical and mental health, especially during teenage years when the body and brain are still developing and need enough rest to function properly.

Doctors explain that lack of sleep negatively affects concentration and memory. Students who do not sleep well often struggle to focus during lessons and perform poorly in exams. They may also find it difficult to understand new information or complete tasks efficiently during the school day. In contrast, teenagers who get enough sleep are usually more attentive, energetic, and motivated at school, which helps them participate actively in classroom activities and discussions.

Sleep also plays an important role in maintaining physical health. During sleep, the body repairs itself and strengthens the immune system, which helps protect against illness and infection. Teenagers who regularly lack sleep may feel tired throughout the day and become sick more often than others. Over time, poor sleep habits can lead to serious health problems that affect daily life and reduce overall well-being.

Experts recommend that teenagers sleep at least eight hours each night to stay healthy. Avoiding electronic devices before bedtime and following a regular sleep schedule can significantly improve sleep quality. Creating a calm and comfortable sleeping environment, such as a quiet and dark room, also helps the body relax and prepare for rest.

Healthy sleep habits are necessary for academic success and overall well-being. By getting enough sleep and following good routines, teenagers can improve both their health and school performance in the long term.

VII. Summary Making (60 Marks)

Read the following text, and then do as required.

Many people choose energy drinks to feel more active; however, drinking them often can cause serious health problems. These drinks contain a high amount of caffeine, which may lead to headaches, nervousness, and difficulty sleeping. They also include too much sugar, causing weight gain and tooth damage. In addition, energy drinks can increase heart rate and blood pressure, which may be dangerous for some people. Although they give a quick burst of energy, this effect does not last long. Soon after, people may feel more tired. Therefore, energy drinks are a poor choice for good health.
