Read the following passage carefully, then answer the questions that follow:

Friendship is one of the most important aspects of life. A good friend is someone who listens to you, helps you when you are sad, and stands by you in tough times. While family members care for us, friends can understand us in a different way. True friends accept you as you are and make you feel safe, happy, and supported.

In today's busy world, people often feel lonely because they are too busy with school or work. Even though social media makes it easier to connect with people, these online friendships are not always deep or real. True friendships need time, effort, and face-to-face conversations where you can share beautiful moments and build trust. A good friend is someone who encourages you to be your best, not someone who always agrees with you. True friends are honest with each other and help each other grow. They are there for you when you need them, and they also need your support in return.

Friendship is about giving and receiving. A great friendship is built on trust, shared moments, and helping each other. If you care for your friends and show them respect, your friendship will last for many years.
